Claimed vs. measured: ten speculative decoding methods on Qwen2.5-VL-7B

MMSpec's released code, re-run under one protocol: pure greedy baseline, tokens per second, and a check that the answer is unchanged. The best intact methods land near 1.57×. The paper's fastest method only leads on a timer that skips image encoding, and two methods buy their speed with corrupted output.

